

5/12/2020

Tuesday's Transition Tip

The Transition to Summer

We know that many schools are concluding their academic year within the next few weeks or so. As a result, Tuesday's Transition Tips would like to continue to give you resources for our students, families, and educators.

The National Technical Assistance Center on Transition (NTACT) is addressing challenges faced by teachers, service providers, students and their families by providing on-going guidance, resource, and sample documents focused on service and supports during the COVID-19 pandemic for transition age students and their families. They are also hosting additional resources on their website from the National Center on Systemic Improvement.

NTACT has a plethora of resources in its Effective Practices and Predictors Matrix that are always helpful; some may be especially useful while you are remote teaching and learning. NTACT is dedicated to supporting states and LEAs in implementing evidence-based and promising practices to ensure students leave high school, in any learning environment, to be prepared for success in the postsecondary world.

Kandace M. Evans, M. Ed, MATM
Teacher Consultant/Transition Coordinator
Washtenaw Intermediate School District